Love Stories. BY MRS. S. M. B. PIATT. Can I tell any? No:

I have forgotten all I ever knew,
I am too old. I saw the fairies go
Forever from the moonshine and the dew
Before I met with you.

*Rose's grandmotherknows
Love stories?" She could tell you one or two.
She is not young?" You wish that you were Rose? . She hears love stories. Are they ever true? Sometime I may ask you.

I was not living when Columbus came here, nor before that? So
You wonder when I saw the fairles, then?
The Indians would have killed shem all, you know?

" How long is long ago ?"

And if I sm too old
To know love stories, why am I not good?
Why don't I read the Rible, and notes old?
Why don't i pray, as all old lad es should?
(I only wish I could) Why don't I buy gray bair?

And why—
Oh: child, the Sphinx herself might spring
Oh of her sands to answer, shelled you dare
Her patience with your endless questioning.
"Does she know anything?"

Perhaps. "Then, could she tell
Love stories?" If her lips were not all stone
For there is one she must remember well—
One whose great gitter showed a flery zone
Brightness beyond its own. One whose long music aches—
How sharp the sword, how sweet the snake, of Queen—
Into the last unquiet meant that breaks.
But the Nile his rises faint between—
You wonder what I mean?

I mean there is but one
Love story in this withered world, for sooth;
And it is brief, and ends where it begun
(What if I tell, in play, the dreary truth?)
With something we call Youth,

[Fram the Baltimore American, 23d.]

The Transit of Venus.

Every boy in the public schools who i moderately well advanced in astronomy has a tolerably clear relea of the solar system. It is represented to him with the sun as a centre, around which seven or eight planets are whirling in circles, of which there is one to by the costly wrappings of gold-worked saeach planet, and that these circles are distant from the sun in various degrees-that of Mercury, or perhaps the problematic Vulcan being the nearest, and Neptune the farthest. But the fact is that the planets move in elligses rather than in circles, and that the ten or eleven books of the great Persian clongation of the paths upon which they travel will, at certain stated times, cause them to move directly across a portion of the wrote ninety-nine works, among them Four sun's orb. Such a movement is called the Divans on the various periods of life, contransit of a planet. For the purposes of taining 130,000 couplets.) For one of the Observation from the earth the transit of Ve- books (" Makszan-i-Arrar") in this volume, nus is the only one that is of any practical composed in honor of Shah Rumi, Nizami they do not cross the disc of the tures of the excavations in this buried city But for astronomical calculations, the transit articles of which we have counterparts. It of Venus is the great event to students upon is astonishing how many things in common our world. These transits have acquired use now were in use then. Here you will immense interest and importance from the fact that they supply data by which the sun's distance from the earth can be determined in the imitation of birds and flowers, pots, ket-

use. In the eighteenth century a French astronomer, M. Delambre, discovered a star very close to the sun, which he has set down as a planet and given the name of Vulcan, but its existence is doubtful. Next to it in nearness comes Mercury, but it revolves so close to the central body that it is very rarely seen with the paked eye in our latitude. There have been attempts to take observations of its transit, but they have always resulted in faitures. Next comes Venus, and then the Earth, the other planets being still farther distant from the sun than that which we inhabit. Of their transits we, of course, know nothing, because sun within our range of observation. with far greater precision than by any other known method. Venus revolves in an orbit within that of the earth, and, next to the sun and moon, is the most brilliant object in the firmament visible to us. In the last century astronomers perceived the importance o' observing her transit across the sun, and When it took place in 1769 there were fiftynine stations established in the various localities from which the phenomenon was visible, nearly all the Governments of Europe s nding out expeditions to take observations. The atmospheric conditions were highly favorable, and excellent views were obtained; but the detects of the instruments then in use and the faultiness of the calculations led to a wide divergence in the estima'es of the distance of the earth from the shoemaker, tailor, carpenter, and blacksmith sun. The magnitude of Venus is nearly equal to that of the earth, and its intense lustre dazzles the eye and aggravates the optical defects of the instruments used. These from the dead city is a surprising reveladifficulties interfered greatly with the obser- tion to every one, showing that the ancients vation made in 1769; but there was another invented and perfected 10,000 implements and greater obstacle not apprehended before and articles of common life which we stil the expedition started out. This was as to use with little improvement thereon, and the precise moment of the movement of the planet across the sun-whether it should be taken when the outer edges of each hinged upon the other, or when the line of departure could be precisely perceived. One expedition made calculations on one basis and another on the potato vine, and tried all the powers of moral other, so that when they were reckoned up the distance between the earth and the sun was figured up at all the way from 87,890,870 ger, that the only effective argument is to miles to £08,984,569 miles. Such diverse figures were of little use to students, and about the year 1822 the fazzous German astronomer Encke, took hold of them and after working them up fixed the proper distance at 95,274,000 mdes. This was held to be the correct standard until 1854 Hansen overhauled the calculations and presented 91,659,-.000 miles as the result. Various other astronomers worked up the problem until it was fixed by general consent at 92,000,000 of miles in round numbers, and if these figures while the shades of night were gathering are wrong the world looks to the observa- fast, where the patient musquito bides his tions to be made next Bosember to correct time and secures his evening meal, in order them. There is a curious conscidence in to listen to the dulcet strains of the orchesthe fact, as evolved by Protessor Smyth, that tra in the mill-pond, and have heard the the distance now recorded is precisely that plaintive whippowill and the melodious of the dimensional features of the great syramid, a demonstration that many of the illustrations now aggarded as recent acquisitions of astronomical science were known to the architects of that most remarkable structure. The line of differcannot but marvel at the results achieved by | ing many feet into the surrounding atmis standing that they were somixed with magic and mysticism. The minuteness of the work | vious to reaching the solid earth. This gerof the scholars who recasted the figures of gantic feat, ladies and gentlemen, becomes, the observations of 1769 may be estimated in the hands of an artist like Mr. Modigan, rent breadth of a lagran hair one hundred rents to the gratification of an admiring and twenty fire feet distant, or a sovereign world. Observe, if you please, that in aceight miles away. And it is such refinement | complishing this ak Mr. Modigan involves of science upon which we now expect to im- his entire body twize in the upper air be-

The nearly to absolute correctness. The transit signal officer ran up the storm flag and sent will not be visible in those parts of the world where it could be most easily ob- ington that a heavy storm cloud had overserved. It will be misible in various parts of the extreme northern hemisphere, but the most favorable station will be far away in the South. Mr. Proctor, in his a denicable work, says that for the observation of a transit which occurs in December the weather is most likely to be good in the southern bemisphere and bad in the northero. If the atmospheric conditions were equally favorable in each the work would be greatly simplified. But as it is, the most important stations will be in the distant South, and it is to these points that the various Governments are sending the majority of their expeditions. Russia alone confines the work of her scie. To ists to the North, having established a chair. The Polynesian Islands, in the South Sea, will be most favorable stations. and to them the United States, Great Britain France, and Germany are sending the greater number of their details for observation. The Swatara, which sailed the other day from New York, will land her first party at the Crozet Islands. Probably it will be the best point of observation, and an English expedition is also to occupy a station upon it. The next point will be Hobart Town, on the southeastern coast of Van Dieman' Land; then Auckland; and last of all, Chat bam Island, a wild and desolated island inhabited by savages, which is some six hundred miles from Auckland. The Swatara will remain at this last point until the 20th of December, by which time it is expected the party will be ready to return. Resuming her homeward journey, the Swatara will pick up the parties in the order that she landed them, and then return home. Pretty nearly the same course will be taken by the observers from other nations, and when they all get back, the results of their observations will be made public. Twenty-seven parties will be sent out by the Russian Government, seven by France, five by England, four by Germany, and three by the Government of New South Wales.

The necessity of so many parties is obvious, on account of the probability that cloudy weather will interfere with the observations at many points. The results to be determined include the distance of the earth from the sun, the distance of Venus from each, and the correction of the errors which were made in the observations of the transit of 1769, to which we have previously alluded. With the perfection to which instruments have recenfly been brought, it is 200 pieces New PRINTS, 10 and 124c. hoped that all these results may be achieved. The outfits of the verious parties are as perfect as modern science and invention can make, and the ablest astronomers of every nation have been appointed to the work. All possible preparations have been made to insure absolute correctness, and it seems impossible to doubt that the science of astronomy will then win its most marvelous triumph over the mysteries of creation.

The following, from Moncure D. Conway's last letter to the Cincinnati Commercial, is scarcely credible. A book written by order of Tamerlane's grandson! A most beautiful book [is in Dr. Leitner's collection], whose exceeding value is shown tins and velvets from which it is unfolded, is one which was written by order of Mirza Yashgar, grandson of Tamerlane. The letters are in gold and the illuminations surpassingly beautiful. The volume contains poets of the fifteenth century, the most important being Nizimi and Khusran (who received a sum equal to $500 per line (or verse?); but he appears to have shunned courts and lived poor, and when the King, Qizil Arslan, went to pay him a visit he (Ni zami) was found at the mouth of a cave on a mat, with his Koran, inkstand, and long pen as his sole earthly possessions. The volume which holds these treasures has been since it was made preserved in the princely family descended from Tamerlane, and how Dr. Leitner could have got so deep in his affections as to become its owner is a problem.

THEN AND NOW-ARTICLES DISCOVERED IN POMPEH. - One of the most interesting feais the discovery of many homely domestic tles, crocks, dishes, cups and saucers, spoons, knives and forks, dippers, skimmers, saucepans, frying-pans, lamps, lamp-stands, flesh-hooks, braziers for charcoal. In a word, pretty much every kitchen, dining-room, or chamber article found in modern use entered into the economy of the daily life of Roman antiquity. All the articles of a lady's toilet, including jewelry of all kinds, gold and silver ornaments, corals and precious stones, were found in bouses in Pompeii. Taken from the retail shops were steelyards, balances, weights, and measures. From a doctor's office was recovered a full set of surgical instruments, including "pulikins" for extracting teeth, and trepans for drilling holes in the sked. There is any number of tools, and indeed implements of almost every present mechanical operation. Taken altogether, the collection of articles taken without giving them credit therefor.

I ARGE AND ATTRACTIVE TRUSTEES, SALE OF A VALUABLE AND IMPROVING TRACT OR PARCEL OF LAND, HALF A MILE EAST OF THE CITY OF RICHMOND, ON THE WILLIAMSBURG TURN-PIKE, OPPOSITE THE NATIONAL CEMETERY, AND NEAR THE DEPOT OF THE CHESA-PEAKE AND OHIO RALL ROAD, BY A UCTION. By virtue of a deed of trust cated May 29, 1872, duty recorded in the cierk's office of the County Court of Henrico to the undersigned trustees, being thereto required by the beneficiary, we will proceed to sell by public auction, on the premises, on MONDAY the 6th of July, 1874, at 5% o'clock P. M., that highly desirable and valuable TRACT OF LAND located as above, formerly called Montrose, but now known as the town of Randolph, containing 246% acres, more or less. This property embraces, with the exception of a five-acrelo! and forty-seven other small lots all the lots laid off in the blan of the said town of Randolph and of the adjoining lands recorded in the said office of Henrico County Court, and according to which blan the said property will be sold either as a whole or in parcels, as Court, and according to which plan the said property will be sold either as a whole or in parcels, as may be determined on at the day of sale.

The situation of this property, the fertility of its oil, and its proximity to the city of Richmond soil, and its proximity to the city of Richmond, make it one of the most desirable investments ever offered by public auction. Though level it is sufficiently elevated to be free from malarious diseases and to command a fine view of the city, her hills, and beautiful scenery. It is sufficiently near the city for operatives desiring to purchase cheap building lots or market farms, from which to raise the contorts of life, to do so without interfering with their business engagements; and it is especially destrople again investment, since we are soon cially destrable as an investment, since we are soon to have a large force engaged at the granite works across the river, most of whom locate in the east-ern portion of the city and seek investments in that locality.

TRIMS: The deed requires cash to the extent of $7.155.75; but by the consent of the parties interested the following terms will be offered in functionary viz: One-fourth cash; balance in equal instalments of two months and one and two years, and the parties of two months and one and two years. thereof, viz: One-fourth cash; analog in equal the staiments of two months and one and two years, respectively, from the day of sale, the purchaser giving his negotiable notes for the deferred payments, with interest added, and secured by a deed of trust.
